Dear Alistor:

I did receive your signed "Non-Exclusive Licencing Agreement" and your check for the licencing of your Method 25 oz. Dish Soap Bottle under my Patent 5.67,107. I am pleased that we were able to come to terms on this matter. Hugh Charlebois did a good job of resolving our differences. I hope we can put this in the past and that we can move forward with new business.

As I stated when I first contacted you in September of 2004, I am interested in developing relationships with companies that market innovative products and have nationwide distribution. I have many more products that may be of interest to your company. Some of my products could become big selling additions to your "Method" product line. Also, if you have some unique products that other companies don't have, that may be your "foot in the door" to other chain stores like Walmart, K.Mart, Walgeens, Right-Aid, etc. Any added chain should generate significant increased sales for Method products.

I think "Method" is an outstanding name for a company, as almost any product can be marketed with that name. You already have a line of products. I would think you would want to keep expanding your line. As you know some products turn into big sellers, and other products can not as big sellers and some products do not sell very well.

Many product lines started with a few products and have expanded into diverse product lines. Examples of some product lines include "Michel Graves". "Mossiemo," "Guess," and "Martha Stewart," etc. "Ralph Loren" has a chain of his own stores selling a wide variety of his products, and also "Ralph Loren" paint is sold in Home Depot!

I have reviewed your website (methodhome.com) and your other products at a Target store. I have purchased several of your products. I think you have the most attractive liquid soap pump bottle in the marketplace. I replaced my two hand soap pump bottles with 2 Method "Sweet Water" pump bottles. I think it was an excellent idea that you got a famous designer like Karim Rashid to design many of your bottles.

It appears to me that you made a big investment in your product line before you sold any of your
